Evangelism is an extraordinary task and privilege, but it has always been difficult. Randy Newman sympathizes with our fears. He jokes that his business card should read, “Randy Newman: evangelistic chicken.” Yet, he finds it hilarious how God has used him in bringing others to faith and in equipping so many people in evangelism. Randy is Senior Fellow for Apologetics and Evangelism at the C.S. Lewis Institute as well as a prolific author of incredible books such as Questioning Evangelism and Mere Evangelism. People say that Randy makes us want to do evangelism and helps us become better at it.
